

IMAGESOURCE INTRODUCES INFORMATION INTERCHANGE

(OLYMPIA, WA May 30, 2007) ImageSource, a leading provider of content management solutions and professional services, announces the commencement of INFORMATION INTERCHANGE, a series of educational forums.

These interactive, round-table discussions will focus on business problems faced by specific industry verticals. The forums will present state of the art best practice approaches to maximize return on your current or planned investment in content management solutions. Upcoming forums include healthcare, education, finance, government and eForms.

Each INFORMATION INTERCHANGE will include a select group of industry peers and presentations by experts illustrating ways to solve some of today's most complex content management needs. Participants will benefit from the small group atmosphere, the availability of specialists who will focus on their particular industry, and the ability to share their strategies for achieving organizational value through enterprise content management.

"These forums were created as a way to extend valuable information to our Customer Partners and others in the industry looking to improve business processes. Each industry faces unique challenges in respect to their content management needs. INFORMATION INTERCHANGE addresses those challenges and provides a platform to seek innovative answers," Terry Butler, Chief Solutions Officer, ImageSource.
