Nexus 2007 Conference Provides Professional Development Units for Project Management Institute Members

(OLYMPIA, WA, October 03, 2007) ImageSource, a leading provider of content management solutions, professional services and the host of Nexus 2007, announced today that they have been designated as a Registered Education Provider® (REP) by the Project Management Institute® (PMI). PMI is the leading nonprofit professional association for Project Management.

Attendees of the two day Nexus conference will earn 12 Professional Development Units® (PDUs). The Project Management Institute requires that Project Management Professionals® (PMPs) accrue a minimum of 60 PDUs every three years in order to maintain certification.

"To be able to offer continuing education credits for certified Project Management Professionals at our annual Nexus forum reveals the true value of the conference," says Terry Sutherland, CEO, ImageSource. "With four PMP certified Project Managers on staff, ImageSource has the utmost respect for the PMI Certification Program. The guidelines set forth by this organization reflect the professional standards we bring to Nexus and every project executed by ImageSource."

The PMI Registered Education Provider Program is designed to facilitate the ongoing professional development of PMI Members and Project Management Professionals, and is only available to education providers that have gone through a rigorous quality assurance, auditing and review process. The PMI-REP Program has established strict criteria and operational guidelines for all participating providers.

"As a PMP certified Project Manager I believe the REP status, and the 12 PDU's available by attending, yields even more value to the Nexus conference and further impetus for all Project Managers working in the technology arena to attend." Gene Eckhart, PMP, Program Manager at ImageSource.
